About the song

Jealousy isn't pretty. It's messy, confusing, and frustratingly human. Ego Death is Julian Guba's latest track, blending pop and rock with electronic elements, while diving into the bitter feeling of watching others glide effortlessly toward success, seemingly without breaking a sweat, as you're left grinding behind the scenes. It explores themes of privilege, nepotism, and shortcuts set against an aggressive, dark-pop beat layered with rock guitars.

Julian Guba channels genuine emotion into every lyric, vividly capturing the tension between self-love and the desire for what others have. At its core, Ego Death is about breaking down and ultimately rebuilding your self-image, emphasizing that the path to success isn't about following in someone else's footsteps but carving out your own.

Honest, energetic, and undeniably relatable, Ego Death invites listeners to dance through their insecurities, let out their rage, and embrace the journey toward their own unique destiny.

About the artist

Julian Guba is a singer, songwriter, and producer originating from Vienna, Austria. From a young age, he started learning how to produce and sing entirely by himself. His music is a mixture of energetic pop with touches of electronic, dance, experimental, and rock genres, creating a very distinctive "Julian Guba" sound. The melodies he creates consistently prove to be earworms, and his lyrics resonate deeply with his audience due to their raw and authentic nature.
